What to do in London

BY CLARA STRUNCK

1 It's a kind OF MAGIC

Make time in your jam-packed autumn exhibition schedule for Mark Leckey: O' Magic Power of Bleakness at Tate Britain. A large-scale presentation of the Turner Prize-winner's theatrical, fantastical pieces, it's wonderfully wacky. Tickets £13. Until 5 Jan (tate.org.uk)

2 SKY'S THE LIMIT

Give your nights out a (literal) boost at Allegra, a new restaurant on the seventh floor of The Stratford hotel, complete with sky garden (above) and a modern European menu — be sure to order the mackerel tartare. Now open (allegra-restaurant.com)

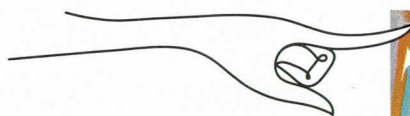

3 ROYAL APPOINTMENT

Antony Gormley's sculptures have graced British coastlines, Manhattan rooftops and the streets of São Paulo. Now, they're coming to the Royal Academy in a stonkingly good exhibition. Beg, steal or borrow tickets to this one. Tickets from £18. Until 3 Dec (royalacademy.org.uk)

Standing tall: Antony Gormley's Lost Horizon I

6 Over the RAINBOW

Renée Zellweger (right) stars as Judy Garland in the much-anticipated biopic, Judy, which charts the singer's afflicted later years. Also featuring Michael Gambon, Rufus Sewell and ES cover star Jessie Buckley, it's a real autumn treat. In cinemas 4 Oct

PARSONS QUEEN

Win yourself serious art-crowd street cred with a trip to Betty Parsons: The Queen of the Circus at Alison Jacques Gallery. The first Parsons show in London for nearly 40 years, it's a triumph of abstract colour and form. 2 Oct to 9 Nov (alisonjacquesgallery.com)

Maine, by Betty Parsons, 1972

JEWEL IN THE CROWN

London icons don't get more recognisable (or stylish) than the Pearly Kings and Queens, who are holding their annual Harvest Festival at Guildhall Yard. Go for the maypole dancing and marching bands, stay to ogle the fantastic outfits. Free. 29 Sep (pearlyksociety.co.uk)

Fusin On Paper 2

Eagle EYE

Already a fan of Luke Edward Hall and Venetia Berry? Let us introduce Roberto Ruspoli, whose exquisite portraits are coming to Alex Eagle Studio. We're sure you'll want one on your wall. 1-8 Oct (alexeagle.co.uk)

LAST CHANCE: north London artist Haris Nukem's exhibition of bold photographs is on display for another day or two at Maddox Gallery, so don't miss out. Until 27 Sep (maddoxgallery.com)

LOOK AHEAD: autumn is now underway, which means Bonfire Night is fast approaching. Book tickets to the famed Alexandra Palace show now. 1-2 Nov (alexandrapalacefireworks.seetickets.com)
